Boston Beauty Declares She Will Not Accept Dollars for Husband.

*How do I love thee? Let me count the ways
I love thee to the depth and breadth and height
My soul can reach when feeling out of sight
For the ends of being and ideal grace.*

From Bessie Chapman-Pierce's favorite poem, by Mrs. Browning.

Mrs. Bessie Chapman-Pierce, the Boston girl who is famed internationally for her beauty, beauty, and whose husband, Mr. H. C. Chapman, is a New York City banker, has been in New York City, where she was met by her husband.

"I love him and I shall not let him go," she said, "and I shall not let him go."

"I love him and I shall not let him go," she said, "and I shall not let him go."

"I love him and I shall not let him go," she said, "and I shall not let him go."

CIGAR NAME

ENTRIES for the suggestion of a name for the Riker-Jaynes Nameless Cigar closed March 31st.

No names left in any of our stores after that date, nor bearing postoffice stamp later than April 1st, will be considered.

This contest proved to be a much bigger proposition than we had anticipated, and we must ask the indulgence of the contributors, as it may take from three to five weeks for us to properly assort and classify the names and award the prize. Announcement of the name accepted, with the name of the contributor and address, will be published in all the newspapers.

We received approximately 105,000 suggestions for the name.

Suggestions were received from every part of the United States.

Seventeen states were represented, as follows: Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, Illinois, Ohio, Michigan, North Dakota, Pennsylvania, Nevada, Alabama, California, Maryland, Washington, D. C. One suggestion came from Wolfville, Nova Scotia. Another one from Richhaven, Liverpool, England, and still another from Culebra, Panama Canal Zone.

We want to assure all the contributors of the fact that we will make every possible effort to determine the result as quickly as possible. Every precaution, however, must be used to guard against any possible chance of error. In the case where a name has been contributed several times, it is absolutely necessary to determine which contributor entered the name first.

Many valuable suggestions have been made. The principal difficulty, however, we fear, will come with the registration of the name. After we select a certain name which pleases us, we may find it has already been entered on the records at Washington. We shall then have to attempt the registration of a second name, and continue to do so until we finally select one that has not previously been used.

Although no purchase was required to make the suggestion of a name eligible, still the sale of the Nameless Cigar was really phenomenal. Smokers were anxious to find out just what we had to offer, and we quote from a few letters received from enthusiastic smokers:

"I cannot remember any cigar that gave me greater pleasure than the Nameless Cigar. I hope to see them on sale in this city soon."

"I shall say as long as the standard is kept up of this cigar, and the price 6c., it beats them all." We reiterate the fact that never has there been such a big value for 6c. offered to the smoker in the history of the cigar business.

THIS IS THE BEST TAILORING FEATURE

Every business has some good features and some bad ones. The tailoring business is just like all others—much that is bad and much that is good. Our desire has been to incorporate as many good features as possible into our clothes we build—so that we might hope for a return engagement after every suit sent out of our shop. There are not enough new people to make it worth while talking about. This is why we must satisfy our old trade or quit business.

In our 19 years' experience we have seen many new suits attempted. Many new features doped out—features that were going to "revolutionize the business," according to the inventors. Most of them have gone the way of the late departed. They are in the discard.

But there is one feature that looms up today—bigger than it ever did. It is our own unique pattern of "the front that won't break down." Through all the years, it has been imitated—copied—counterfeited—and stolen bodily. But imitations never made good. The original is always best—and this great, staving feature of Gale & Kent's still stands as the very best feature ever put across in the building of coats.

Every coat built here is on this original plan. Study the plan and see for yourself just what it means. Anybody can understand it. The prices for our suits are $15 to $25—the guarantee is absolute—no hedging on our part. The cloth is the best that money can buy or brains select. The time is right now—Easter deliveries guaranteed.

Men, here's pipe tobacco that answers every question

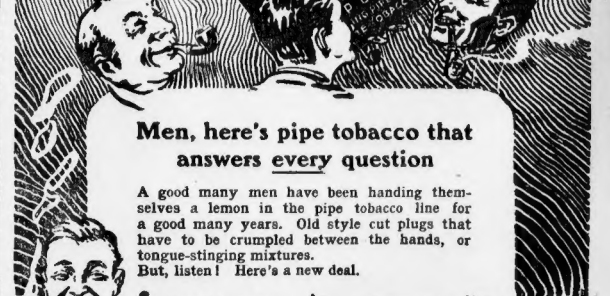

A good many men have been handing themselves a lemon in the pipe tobacco line for a good many years. Old style cut plugs that have to be crumpled between the hands, or tongue-stinging mixtures. But, listen! Here's a new deal.

PRINGLE ALBERT
combines every quality that smokers yearn for. It's always ready. Goes right from the tin to your pipe. It's long-burning, close-fire and burns down to dust-free ashes. It has perfect flavor and fragrance and can't bite your tongue.

Slip a dime over the counter at the nearest dealer's and say "Pringle Albert"—then get out that old jimmy pipe and take a fresh start in pipe-smoking enjoyment. Also in half-penny tin and pound glass humidors.

"Hush, dear," she said equably. "Don't let me get excited. You know how bad life is for you. * * *

"Don't you understand at all?" he insisted. "Not the least little bit?" Is it possible to say what I've said and for the first time to say you do not understand a single word? I suppose it is."

He took his arm from her knee and set it down on the flagstone again.

"Of course, I understand every word," she said, "and if you really understand it's useless—say you say you do" * * *

"Hopeless!" he interjected acerbically.

"Well, then, as long as you don't worry me about it I dare say it's all right. I ought to do think what you said about

"Sneaking me," she said, "or play a tune in your little key, so as not to disturb her—you know that always does you good."

"His face flashed again.

"I don't go to his," "how often am I told your that I don't!" There isn't any trouble in this place, that you understand? Some people play tunes on the piano. I don't. I make music. And you can't make music out of nothing; you have to draw it to yourself as you play, out of the air around you. It comes creeping closer, closer, like a beautiful ghost, and when you catch it and materialize it is that you call a tune."

"And there's no music in this place."

"If you ask now," she said, bundling the stockings into the basket at her feet and getting up briskly, "I think you ought to go to bed directly, this minute, with a nice cup of tea and a hot bottle to your feet. We shall be having you next, and a nice hot out-that'll be for me—and her having to begin her dancing on Monday and all, and you laid up and not able to play for her."

"I have killed his love! I have killed his love!"

At length she became conscious of her physical weakness of her aching body, and she turned off the lights and lay down. She did not suffer, both mind and body were in a happy delirious condition.

The window in her bed was open and cold night air blew in, chilling her. The night air did not move to close the window.

She felt that she was alone in the world and that the world of the passing years were all there about the stillness of the night. She felt that she was a soft knock at the door. It opened—and she was kneeling by the bed, his arms about her.

"I was not indifferent, I only wanted you to think I was. I knew you are at the House." The calm voice came back to the café, that is its own. She felt that she was there—the house to find where you want.

Not Brutality

"Are you quite through? Have you said all the cruel, brutal things you wish to say?"

"I have said nothing brutal. I can never talk to you patiently without reminding it brutal. I wish you would try to be more reasonable, Alice. And I wish you would try to realize that no man is going to be led around by a string and forced to do tricks like a pet dog. And will stand for that sort of thing."

There was the sound of heavy steps and door opened and banged shut again. Alice leaned against the window-sill and covered her face with her hands. In that moment it came to her like a revelation—a love and tenderness that her husband never, that he had given her unawares—all these years, and that she had never appreciated.

WESCOTT TEST
CAR DUE TO-DAY

By J. C. KERRISON.

The Wescott exp., which is making the trip from Indianapolis to this city, is due to arrive at the salesrooms of the Taylor Motor Sales Company in Massachusetts avenue between 1 and 2 o'clock to-day. This 1200-mile trip has been one full of hardships as far as road conditions are concerned, the motor having proven a veritable find for work from the very start.

A number of men in the trade have promised to avail themselves of the unusual opportunity to examine a car which Wescott has met with nearly impassable roads, has had mud up to her axles, and has plowed through snow twelve inches deep on the level and over the radiator in steep hills.

Interest in the campaign for a more general use of electric vehicles for pleasure and business purposes does not flag. Any person who has visited any one of the larger number of electric vehicle and storage battery agencies in Boston during the past month must have been impressed with the unusual activity in their sales campaigns.

The Edison Electric Illuminating Company of Boston jumped into this field with vim and interest several weeks ago. An informal dinner was given on the evening of March 3. The Boston Edison Company

The dinner is intended to be entirely informal and more local in character than the first one. The idea is to have a full and free discussion of the possibilities of electrical vehicle business. It is important that all the interests get together in the united campaign. The Boston Edison Company has explained at length its own views as to the ways and means of developing the electrical vehicle industry in the district.

The new electric garage which the Boston Edison Company has established at No. 126 Atlantic street, Boston, is the first of its kind in the city. It is a two-story building, and is the largest of its kind in the city. It is a two-story building, and is the largest of its kind in the city. le to-day. As soon as the announcement was made that the Boston Edison Company would open a garage, applications came thick and fast for opportunities to take advantage of this service; and almost before the absolutely necessary equipment for charging had been installed electric vehicles were finding space in the building. The garage is in fine shape, fully equipped to give complete care, charging and make minor repairs.
